Seminar Series 7 September 2011

Māori and the Rugby World Cup 2011

Roundtable discussion with Rau Hoskins (Unitec/Chair of Ngā Aho Network), Dr Brendan Hokowhitu (Associate Professor at the University of Otago) and Hamuera Kahi (Lecturer at the University of Canterbury). Chaired by Peter Addis (Chair of MASS and Head of School, Māori Studies at Victoria University of Wellington)

There's no denying that the Rugby World Cup is going to be huge, especially for sports fans, New Zealand tourism and the hospitality industry. But what about for Māori? What impact will it have on us and our communities? What are the economic, social and cultural consequences likely to be? And how can we share in the successes while avoiding the pitfalls? Join us for a panel discussion on these and other key questions about the Rugby World Cup, just two days before the opening game kick-off.

*This seminar is a joint event with the MANU-Ao Academy and MASS,
