

Tihei Mauri Ora!

Integrity

He tangata kī tahi

A person of a single word

Hon. Georgina te Heuheu QSO, the first Māori woman to gain a law degree from the University of Victoria and be admitted to the High Court as Barrister and Solicitor, went on to practice law in Wellington and Rotorua before entering parliament as a National Party MP. It is of no surprise that the former Waitangi Tribunal member and current Minister for Courts expressed an interest in “models of leadership that place high priority on integrity”.

Are you always above board, and honest in your dealings with people? I'm sure you are, because it's good business, character-enhancing, and right. Our world is a smaller place than you think it is. People know you, watch you, and imitate you. Like Georgina, make your name something to be proud of – and reputation something to remember. It's never been more important that each of us keep our level of integrity high. It's essential in whatever you do and say. We are only as good a person as our actions. Therefore, let your actions today and in the future be great! Kia pai tō wiki!
